

Face the Facts!

by Haley Hakimian

Match the face of the student with her most embarrassing moment below.

A) For one seventh grade girl it actually happened in sixth grade. She was walking into class and her skirt got caught on the board and...it RIPPED!

B) Another girl, also in seventh grade, was shopping in American Eagle with her mom. While she was in the store she ran into two of her friends. They talked for a while, and when she turned around to leave, she ran straight into the door and caused a huge commotion

C) The last girl is an eighth grader and her story is something like the first, except her story takes place in the library. She put on her backpack and it pulled up her skirt so she was flashing everyone.

Clever Colors

compiled by Sarah Wilk, based on an article from Teen Magazine, August 2003

Did you know that what you wear can help you concentrate? It sounds weird, but it's true...

Even though we have to wear uniforms, you can still apply tips from the color chart, especially by wearing an accessory it like a necklace, bracelet, or earrings. On your next test or exam, follow the chart—it can't hurt!

Red- This color will boost your confidence, but if you're stressed about an exam, avoid red—you will become strained.

Orange- This hue is said to enhance your creativity. It's perfect for an exam that requires long essays.

Yellow- A bright shade supposedly boosts your memory, so throw a yellow tee on under your shirt for your next test.

Green- This color of nature can distract you, which is why it is not great for exams.

Blue- A cool color that can help you relax and concentrate. It's perfect for a tough test that you're really prepared for.

Purple- Got a multiple choice test coming up? Try a purple shirt under your itchy oxford.

Black- If you're feeling bummed out about school, skip this color. But if you think you're totally under control then go for it; black can make you feel powerful.

Pink- A soft, gentle shade like pink will make you feel warm and snugly, so save it to wear to the mall, not for a test.
